ABOUT THE COLLEGE

Mother Teresa Pharmacy College was established in the year 2009 by MCM Educational society Sathupally which is serving the nation in the field of education since 2001.

The college was approved by PCI, Recognized by Government of Telangana state. Institute offering B.Pharmacy from 2009 and Master of Pharmacy with two specializations in Pharmaceutics 2011 and Pharmaceutical analysis from 2021.

The college has well furnished, e-teaching classrooms, a good collection of 6020 Books, 19 Printed journals, 52 e-journals in the library, Computer lab with high speed internet, Herbal garden, Separate hostel facility for girls and boys within the campus, a special playground for games and sports, also a Canteen.

The college has a very good team of committed and qualified teaching faculty, out of them few doctorates and some are registered for Ph.D and carrying out their research activity with facilities available in the college. The college encourages R&D activities through its M. Pharm, B. Pharm projects. Apart from academics our college encourages students in co-curricular activities.

The college has earned name and fame for its high academic excellence, disciplined, promoting the spiritual and social value which helps in the integrated growth of the students.

Objective of the program:

The goal of all sophisticated drug delivery systems, therefore, is to deploy medications intact to specifically targeted parts of the body through a medium that can control the therapy's administration by means of either a physiological or chemical trigger. To achieve this goal, researchers are turning to advances in the worlds of micro- and nanotechnology. During the past decade, polymeric microspheres, polymer micelles, and hydrogel-type materials have all been shown to be effective in enhancing drug targeting specificity, lowering systemic drug toxicity, improving treatment absorption rates, and providing protection for Pharmaceuticals against biochemical degradation. In addition, several other experimental drug delivery systems show exciting signs of promise, including those composed of biodegradable polymers, dendrimers (so-called star polymers), electroactive polymers, and modified C-60 fullerenes (also known as "buckyballs").

Outcome of the program

The technologies described here obviously represent little more than the tip of the iceberg for the development of drug delivery systems, and few of these even extend beyond the realm of benchtop experimentation. Although these approaches are the focus of intense, ongoing research, other processes are also under consideration, including aerosol inhalation devices, transdermal methodologies, forced pressure injectables, and biodegradable polymer networks designed specifically to transport new gene therapies. Many of these advances are at the very least predicated on the technologies just described.

The need for research into drug delivery systems extends beyond ways to administer new pharmaceutical therapies; the safety and efficacy of current treatments may be improved if their delivery rate, biodegradation, and site-specific targeting can be predicted, monitored, and controlled. From both a financial and a global health care perspective, finding ways to administer injectable-only medications in oral form and delivering costly, multiple-dose, long-term therapies in inexpensive, potent, and time-releasing or self-triggering formulations are also needed. The promise of administration methods that allow patients to safely treat themselves is as significant as any other health care development, particularly in developing countries where doctors, sterile syringes, sterile needles, and sophisticated treatments are few and far between.

However, this will require surmounting novel fabrication and engineering challenges. At present such a device is not available at reasonable price for widespread use throughout the globe. At present, open-vessel MAE seems to be the most convenient, simple, and rapid option for extraction of thermolabile phytoconstituents, as it does not demand any sophisticated machinery (except a simple microwave oven), as opposed to methods like ultrasonication or SFE.

Topics Covered

Principle behind the operation of various extraction methods,

Factors influencing method performance,

Research progress,

Strength and weakness of different extraction approaches

Collection and authentication of plant material & drying

Size reduction

Extraction

Filtration

Concentration

Drying & reconstitution

Advanced Extraction Methods

Soxhlet extraction

Microwave Assisted Extraction (MAE)

Ultrasonication Assisted Extraction (UAE)

ABOUT THE COLLEGE

Mother Teresa Pharmacy College was established in the year 2009 by MCM Educational society Sathupally which is serving the nation in the field of education since 2001.

The college was approved by PCI, Recognized by Government of Telangana state. Institute offering B.Pharmacy from 2009 and Master of Pharmacy with two specializations in Pharmaceutics 2011 and Pharmaceutical analysis from 2021.

The college has well furnished, e-teaching classrooms, a good collection of 6020 Books, 19 Printed journals, 52 e-journals in the library, Computer lab with high speed internet, Herbal garden, Separate hostel facility for girls and boys within the campus, a special play ground for games and sports, also a Canteen.

The college has a very good team of committed and qualified teaching faculty, out of them few doctorates and some are registered for Ph.D and carrying out their research activity with facilities available in the college. The college encourages R&D activities through its M. Pharm, B. Pharm projects. Apart from academics our college encourages students in co curricular activities.

The college has earned name and fame for its high academic excellence, disciplined, promoting the spiritual and social value which helps in the integrated growth of the students.

Objective of the program:

Extraction is the first crucial step in preparation of plant formulations. Modern methods of extraction are effective in advancing the development of traditional herbal remedies. Sample preparation is of utmost importance to the development of analytical methods for the analysis of constituents present in the botanicals and herbal preparations.

Medicinal plants are important for discovery and identification of new therapeutic compounds. Extraction method plays an important role in separation and characterization of different phytochemicals from herbs, and screening plant extracts for novel leads. Conventional methods are exhaustive and require more time, power, sample and solvent consumption is higher than their modern counterparts.

Outcome of the program

Modern methods are amenable to high degree of automation, and several parameters can be controlled at a time. Sample and solvent consumption are also reduced by selecting the most appropriate method. A good extraction can be achieved in shorter period of time, and the recovered extract can have improved yield and quality than that prepared by a conventional method. Methods such as SFE, MAE, and UAE are better suited for the extraction of heat labile and volatile compounds, which is not the case with the conventional methods.

Former are more promising for industrial applications due to their enhanced efficiency, specificity and selectivity. Further innovations such as a Soxhlet under reduced pressure (which will bring together advantages like rapid heating due to microwave, fast boiling of solvents due to reduced pressure, and scope of solvent recovery) will in future make extraction of thermolabile plant constituents much more efficient and rapid.

Objective of the program:

Patent drafting contains various aspects such as the complete knowledge of the invention, technical subject matter, in-depth knowledge of various laws, a detailed description of the invention, and associates figures/drawings therefore it is a tough task. Patent drafting is a part of how to patent an idea and is the process of writing the patent description and claims. It is at the core of every patent application. When the patent is issued or allowed, the draft serves as the specification part of the document.

Objectives:

Filing a patent can not only transform your idea into an invention but it can also help secure exclusive rights to market or license your invention. Patent drafting is the first step to protecting a great idea. We should always keep in mind that the purpose of a patent draft or specification is to highlight the existing problem in the current state of the art or technology and provide a solution, which is new and not obvious to a person skilled in the art.

Purpose of patent:

When an inventor obtains a patent, they secure the right to exclude others from using, making and selling their product or method of use for 20 years, while maintaining the right to sell the item exclusively and for a higher price.

Drug movement within the body is a complex process. the major objective is therefore to develop a generalized and simple approach to describe, analyze and interpret the data obtained during in vitro drug disposition studies.

The two major approaches in the quantitative study of various kinetic processes of drug disposition in the body are

1. Model approaches, and
2. Model independent approaches

Outcome of the program

Successful use of drug delivery system in clinical medicine has been hampered by poor understanding of the mechanisms, in this review of critical difference in ADME process for small molecule drug, protein, therapeutic. The drug modulates the efficiency of various ADME processes. Well designed PK/BD studies for DDS coupled with quantitative approaches for describing PK can be useful and ultimately a low for the design of better drug delivery system

Objective of the program:

Industrial sterilization processes can be defined as those operations having as objective the destruction, permanent inactivation, or physical removal of all microorganisms. In the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries, different sterilization methods are applied to materials, equipment, and products of different chemical composition and physical characteristics.

The sterilization processes currently used in the industrial practice: thermal sterilization processes, radiation sterilization processes, chemical sterilization processes and sterile filtration processes. Thermal sterilization is the most commonly used sterilization method in the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries. Industrial radiation sterilization processes utilize electron beams, gamma rays, or X-rays. Chemical sterilization is typically used for system that cannot be sterilized by other methods or for which other sterilization approaches would be impractical. Sterile filtration processes utilize both depth filters, as prefilters, in order to remove the larger amount of particle and microbial contaminants in the fluid and membrane filters, as the final sterilizing filters.

Sterilization should be used for instruments, surgical gloves and other items that come in direct contact with the blood stream or normally sterile tissues. It can be achieved by high-pressure steam

Objective of the program:

QUALIFICATION OF ANALYTICAL INSTRUMENT

- Analytical instrument qualification helps justify the continued use of equipment but it not alone does not alone the quality of data.
- Analytical instrument qualification is 1 of the 4 critical components of data quality.
- Figure 1 shows these components as layered activities within a quality triangle.
- Each layer add to the over all quality.
- Analytical instrument qualification forms the base for generating quality data.
- The other essential components for generating quality data are following the analytical methods validation systems suitability test and quality control checks these quality control checks are shown below
- Quality control checks
- System suitability test
- Analytical methods validation
- Analytical instrument qualification

OUTCOME OF THE PROGRAMME:

- Most analysis of performed using reference or calibration standards
- Single or multi point calibration or standardization correlates instrument response with known analytic quantity or quality .calibrate /standards are generally prepared from certified material suitable for the test . besides calibration or standardization some analysis also require the inclusion of quality control checks sample which provide an in process assurance of the test performance suitability.

While there is no cure for HIV, medication known as antiretrovirals work by preventing the damage the virus does to the immune system. The outlook for children with HIV in the UK today is very good, a lot better than it was even 15 to 20 years ago. HIV is now considered a treatable, chronic life-long condition. There is evidence of this within national outcome data and within the service at GOSH, where health outcome data is excellent.

The infectious diseases team at GOSH provide regular medical monitoring of every child and young person with HIV to monitor for how HIV is affecting their health and how effective the medication is as well as providing holistic multidisciplinary care. Medical monitoring involves a number of blood tests and examinations.

Moreover, new anti-infective treatments have been discovered, and it is extremely important to know when to use them to avoid abuse and misuse of these new drugs because of possible negative antimicrobial resistance outcomes. Furthermore, new vaccines have appeared on the market, and it is essential that practitioners be informed of their impact on public health. For these reasons, the International Journal of Molecular Sciences has decided to dedicate a Special Issue to the pathophysiology, diagnostics and prevention of infectious diseases. This Special Issue has the main goal of presenting recent advances in different aspects of infectious diseases, covering paediatric and adult issues as well as different pathogens.

The Infectious Disease Pathology Service of the Division of Surgical Pathology provides comprehensive diagnostic expertise and services relating to the pathology of bacterial, mycobacterial, fungal, and parasitic infections of all tissues and organ systems.

In addition to evaluation by conventional histology, a variety of specialized immunohistochemical and molecular tests are utilized. In close collaboration with the Clinical Microbiology Laboratory and Division of Infectious Diseases, laboratory results and clinical findings are incorporated to arrive at an integrated diagnosis for each case.

Outcome of the program

The Infectious diseases department provides clinical expertise in the diagnosis and management of unusual and complicated infections in children including tropical diseases, and with Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) infection. There are also specialist clinics for children with tuberculosis and chronic viral hepatitis. A large part of our work is around antimicrobial stewardship, a process which ensures that medicines used to treat infections are used in the best possible way across the hospital. One of the main elements of our outpatient service is dedicated to the care of children living with HIV. The following section details clinical results for this service for which we have robust local and national HIV is a virus which attacks the body's immune system and weakens its ability to fight infections and other diseases, such as cancer. It is a life-long condition that can lead to acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), where the body's immune system becomes very weak.
