Objective of the program:

A thermal method of analysis is a technique in which measure a physical property of a material as we subject it to a change in temperature. In this chapter we consider three examples of thermal methods: thermogravimetry, differential thermal analysis, and differential scanning calorimetry.

Thermal methods of analysis include a group of techniques in which change in physical property of a material is measured as a function of temperature while the substance is subjected to a controlled temperature programme.

In modern era the new materials are studied with respect to—composition, stability, chemical reactions and dynamic properties.

Thermal methods are useful for the sekind of analysis.

These methods also provide information about the structure, composition, purity and the temperature phase change of a material.

Objectives:

Thermal analysis is a general term defining a technique used to analyze the time and temperature at which physical changes occur when a substance is heated or cooled. Each technique is defined according to the types of physical changes being analyzed. Thermal analysis methods are normally used to monitor endothermic processes (melting, boiling, sublimation, vaporization, desolvation, solid-solid phase transitions, and chemical

Specifically, these studies will help to monitor the overall response to the drug, as well as any adverse reactions in target organs, dose dependence, and in some cases, potential reversibility.

Outcome of the program

Toxicity studies investigate the safety profile of the candidate compound. They also provide important information about the absorption, distribution, metabolism, and excretion (ADME) of the compound in the body. Candidate compound must be assessed in many different kinds of non-clinical toxicity study before it can be administered to the first human volunteer; even more toxicity studies are required thereafter before the medicine receives marketing authorisation.

form cells, cells combine to form tissues, tissues combine to form organ, organ combine to form organ systems, and organ system combine to form organism. Cellular level is the most fundamental level of organization. A cell is the fundamental unit of life and smallest unit capable of reproducing itself. While the structure and function of cell vary greatly depending on the organism, all cells share few characteristics. Cells are composed of organic based membrane. Cell also have many structures called organelles with in their cytoplasm that perform various cellular functions.

Outcome of the program

Students understood that the structure and purpose of basic components of prokaryotic and eukaryotic cells, especially macromolecules, membranes, and organelles. students will understand that how cellular components are used to generate and utilize energy in cells. Cellular components underlying mitotic cell division. students Gained the knowledge of cell biology to selected examples of changes or losses in cell function. The key role of the mitosis and meiosis during life cycle. function relationships how form follows function in animals. students can understood the three stages of information processing in nervous system and relate to the major anatomical division of the vertebral nervous system.

However, an animals genotype can be manipulated by breeding and more advanced scientific techniques (genetic engineering and cloning). Breeding cage cards should be filled out completely One male and 1-2 females are placed in the breeder cage. Records of rodent breeding are also kept in a Breeding Book that is kept in each room used for breeding.

Outcome of the program

The use of appropriate and skilled handling is essential to ensure that animals readily accept or actively seek human contact and procedures are carried out efficiently. If routine handling procedures are aversive, animals are likely to develop anxiety and show exaggerated stress responses when approached. Proper handling techniques can reduce animal pain and distress and improve animal welfare. Animal handling methods require training, skill, and behavioral knowledge of the species you are working with. This similarity allows for accurate testing on similar genes. Furthermore, many diseases are shared between animals and
